GRADUATE PROJECT

Project Goal

Students taking this course for graduate credit will provide a written analysis of storytelling and modern day marketing.

Required Reading

Storynomics: Story Driven Marketing in the Post-Advertising World by Mckee and Garace.
(I have copies of this book I am willing to lend)

Analysis short answer. Half page to full page for each of the following:

- 1) Discuss the author's theories on traditional advertising and changing landscape and challenges for chief marketing officers.
- 2) Discuss the author's storytelling examples that supported successful marketing efforts. Do you agree or disagree with the thinking? Support your position.
- 3) Demonstrate that you understand the differences between engaging storytelling verses process, hierarchy, chronology and journey-type narratives.
- 4) Discuss the authors eight stages of story design and the role of each.
- 5) Similar to what the authors discuss about the film Moneyball, provide an analysis of a different film and apply the eight stages of story, identifying each part of the story that assisted in keeping the audience engaged.
- 6) On page 77, the authors describe Dove's "Real Beauty Campaign" and why Ad Age named the campaign one of the best of the century. Consider this and provide a modern day example of a branding campaign that has used engaging storytelling to capture and hold attention of targeted consumers.
